Monochrome Muse

Our ritzy, geometric designs were inspired by Bridget Riley's iconic Black and white art deco, pop-art fashion prints and the chic homes on Calabasas' hills. These patterns are also reminiscent of Japanese brick layouts and greek key patterns; giving it a contemporary-ornamental quality that is charming and glamorous.

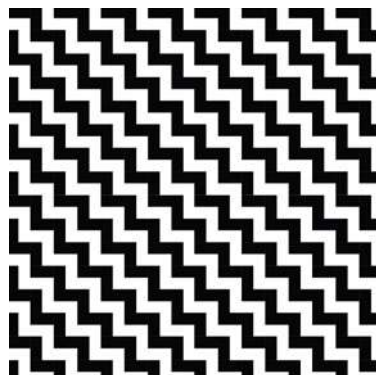

This collection of 19 designs features directional overlays that can be applied to a large variety of spaces including wall features, screen, feature dividers, doors, and furniture. The names of the tiles reflect lavish charm. For instance, "West Egg" references the location of Jay Gatsby's mansion in The Great Gatsby Novel. It represents a recently acquired fortune.

SINGAPORE TREASURES SERIES

Singapore Treasures is an original artwork created by Deborah McKellar of Talking Textiles, made available as a feature right in your own kitchen.

Singapore Treasures backsplash features elements that hark back to the Straits Settlements, a group of British territories in Southeast Asia. Singapore became part of the Straits Settlements in 1826, before it was named a Crown colony in 1867. Singapore grew exponentially during this time, establishing itself as an important trading post and welcoming an influx of immigrants from all over the world seeking a brighter future.

The Straits Settlements stamp in this artwork is based on an actual postage stamp in circulation from 1937 to 1941. Featuring King George VI, this is the last stamp series of the Straits Settlements. The abstract blue, watery splashes of ink in the backsplash design evoke the sea and the surrounding waters, which made Singapore flourish as an island entrepôt in the early days. The story of European explorers arriving on the tropical island of Singapore with all its beautiful flora and fauna is expressed through this artwork.

Max sheet Size: 1600 x 2150mm

Important Note: BB Projector has a surface that has been treated with a special acid-etched configuration that allows for the best balance of projection capability and writing functionality. Hence, the writing surface is slightly less erasable as compared to the polished option. It is still a writable surface that has to be maintained with regular glass cleaning liquid and cloth. Bianca Board Projector is recommended only for wall areas that require projection use. If the wall is meant for writing only, Bianca board Polished is recommended.
